

CREDIT CARDS...

...Miles and Ministry! What do these 3 have in common?

by Al Mellinger

On the surface it would not appear that they do, but they could.

Many of you use your Credit Card for almost everything you purchase. It gives you one statement and if you pay it off (Which I recommend) it doesn't cost you a thing to use it. Plus many cards give you point/miles for every dollar you put on the card. While a youth pastor I even had some parents ask if we took Credit Cards to pay for events we were running. (So we looked into it and decided to take them to get more kids at events and activities) Credit Cards are a part of our lives.

So if you are a miles/point collector and are making a donation regularly or even just once you can use your miles collecting credit card to help with missions. And it can be set up to happen each month so that you won't forget.

So it is a win-win arrangement. You gain extra miles that you can use to fly over and visit your missionary (or some other place if you want) and they get the needed support to continue doing what they are doing for the kingdom.

One last benefit to the missionary – the gift is processed faster which means the funds are freed up to actually assist with ministry today – not having to wait for it to get to Indy, be recorded, deposited, cleared and finally credited to the missions account.

Don't have a Credit Card – your checking account can be done automatically too for a one time gift or a regular contribution.
